

Dear Parents and Guardians

The public response to the first episode of “Revolution School” has been huge and overwhelmingly positive. Our teachers have been buoyant and students have been excited. Anecdotal feedback from parents has also been really pleasing. Indeed it was raw and at times brutally real. But it began to paint the picture of a school that is truly focused on maximising the potential of each student. I hope episode two will continue to show the extraordinary efforts our teachers make for the benefit of all students.

Series Synopsis:

EPISODE TWO: TUESDAY, 7 JUNE AT 8.30PM

In this episode the focus is on how to get the best out of students, be they high-achievers or strugglers in danger of dropping out. Year 11 student Rachel wants to get into medicine at University so needs to be in the top 1% of students Australia-wide. Rachel’s parents pressure her to perform, which causes her stress at home and school. They meet to try to resolve their differences, but Rachel’s mum is very upset.

One of the students has been caught with drugs and it’s a major dilemma for principal Michael Muscat.

Currently 25% of Australian kids don’t complete Year 12 but Kambrya makes valiant attempts to keep students at school.

A special program, Darrabi, is set up for a group of teenage boys who don’t fit in to mainstream classes. The boys are unruly and performing badly in all subjects so teacher Martin Macdonald and assistant principal Keith Perry plan a wilderness bush trek to build their self esteem.

NAPLAN, National literacy and numeracy testing, is held and Kambrya decides it needs to further improve its reading results. The school calls in literacy expert Di Snowball, who shows teachers a simple but effective method for improving literacy. At the start of each class, students must spend time reading a book. The kids love it, and the results are impressive.
